

Annie Wong & Keith Nakamura | La Venta Inn, Palos Verdes Estates

PHOTOGRAPHED BY BARNET PHOTOGRAPHY

Annie and Keith met at a friend's Halloween party over seven years ago. Although her roommate had had her eye on him, Annie called dibs first. They've been inseparable ever since. Five years later, on a romantic trip to France, Keith and Annie ended a long day of sightseeing in the gardens of Versailles. As the sun was setting behind the trees, the couple stopped on a bridge over the canal to savor the beautiful landscape. It was there that Keith asked Annie to be his wife.

SOPHISTICATED FUN

Invitations Tiffany blue and brown invitations with cherry blossoms and the groom's family crest, from Paper Source at West LA Print Floral & Event Design. Enchanted Florist dreamed up a modern, sophisticated atmosphere with a fun vibe. Fragrant white flowers trimmed the gazebo along with flowing white chiffon. The couple celebrated their heritage with a Chinese Tea Ceremony in which a luxurious large red satin sheet with gold embroidery covered the floor along with an array of red satin pillows. Catering The couple loves food, so they spent a lot of time choosing a caterer. The five-course meal by New York Food Company included asparagus and Arborio rice soup, heirloom tomato antipasto, butternut squash ravioli, blackberry sorbet intermezzo, and Angus osso bucco. The milk chocolate fountain and deluxe coffee station were a perfect ending to the lavish meal. Cake New York Food Company also baked the devil's food cake with hazelnut chocolate mousse filling. Wedding Gown A diamond white, strapless, chiffon gown with ruching and a chapel-length train by Maggie Sottero. Formalwear After Hours Honeymoon Thailand
